Description: Senior employees typically possess superior technical abilities; however, this is only one-half of the equation required to increase the effectiveness of your organization. Management and senior leaders must focus on the skills necessary to work with others and get the best results from their teams. So, how do we teach people to inspire, motivate and ignite passion in others? We do this by teaching them to lead with emotional intelligence.

Emotional intelligence is the magnetic attraction that captures everyone's attention and moves teams forward. Communicators and motivators are the drivers that take groups to the next level, and your leaders must have these soft skills to elevate your business successfully.

This engaging workshop discusses how each of the 15 emotional intelligence competencies impacts the success of your teams and organization. Building emotional intelligence inside your company cannot be undervalued when supporting the growth of your business. With the corporate world changing with emerging technologies and shifting demographics in the workplace, we need to learn new ways to encourage more honest conversations, transparent information sharing and collaborative teamwork. Incorporating EI into your leadership repertoire will take your organization to new heights.

Expand your skills, invest in your team!

Learning Objectives:

- Understand and apply emotional intelligence to your leadership style, and learn how to leverage your EQ strengths to be a more effective teammate, manager, and leader.
- Gain a deeper understanding of your teams' strengths and development opportunities.
- Investigate how EQ plays a role within the organization's strategic objectives and understand the implications this will have on your teams.
