

OLLI Flashback Quiz Answers

OLLI moves to online registration for courses.

The first printed catalogue replaces the stapled dittoed lists of courses.

The members vote to change the name from Southern Oregon Learning in Retirement (SOLIR) to OLLI at SOU; two years later OLLI receives the first million-dollar grant from OSHER.

SOU provides one room in the former married student housing building; later named Campbell Center, for classes. 147 members pay $75 for the year; the first term consists of nine courses.

All classes move to other locations in Ashland or Medford while major are made to the Campbell Campus, including new chairs and wide TVs instead of pull-down movie screens. (And Keurig coffee makers instead of hot water and packets of instant.)

Classes are offered at the Manor in Medford for the first time.

The first term in which both in person and online courses are offered.

Membership in the organization reaches 1000.

The first courses are held at HEC (Higher Education Center) in Medford.

After 95 volunteer instructors agree to learn how to teach on Zoom, the organization presents over 100 courses online for the first time.
